Bill Napoli (1933 - 2014) was an Italian American bodybuilder and fitness innovator who began competing at the national level in 1969. He had a long and successful career as a fashion model and workout innovator. Bill Napoli worked with the founder of Muscle Beach (Paul Dillet) as well as the founder of Gyms where workouts took place. He is widely known as the creator of the Gherlini squat machine. He also helped to form the Muscle Beach Record Club. The Gherlini squat machine made famous on the Bodybuilding circuit. Being a bodybuilder, the Gherlini squat machine was invented by Bill Napoli, a top bodybuilder at the time, and was used in gyms (obstacles) or by itself to make the exercise more challenging. The present owner is Ricky Garcias, owner of the Ricky Garcias Fitness empire.

Early life Bill Napoli was born in 1933. He had three brothers and one sister. Bill worked very hard from the age of 14, and worked on getting stronger at the gym. He worked for the government for six years and was also a boxer for four years. He then went to the United States Air Force and worked as a mechanic for three years. Then in 1957 he was in the Bikini Athlete Contest. He won the first two categories. He then competed in 1960 against the first Mr. America, Tom E. Thompson. Thompson asked for a rematch.

Causes of death in patients with cystic fibrosis: trends from 1972 to 1997. To identify trends in the causes of death and in the organ systems associated with death in patients with cystic fibrosis (CF). Cohort study. Urban adult CF centers and institutes. Patients with CF registered in the Collaborative Adult Cystic Fibrosis Registry. Mortality, cause of death, and the organ systems involved in death. Of 2486 patients in this study, 685 died. Causes of death were as follows: respiratory (34%), infectious (30%), gastrointestinal (20%), cardiovascular (12%), renal (5%), neurological (4%), hematologic (4%), and cancer (4%). By the end of the study, there was no significant change in annual mortality (41% died within the first 2 yr of life). For 10 years, death with CF was associated with a higher percentage of deaths with pancreatic insufficiency, pulmonary insufficiency, and diabetes; a lower percentage of deaths with hepatic disease; and no significant change in deaths with malnutrition, hyponatremia, GI hemorrhage, or septicemia. By the end of the study, death with CF was associated with a higher percentage of deaths with pulmonary insufficiency, diabetes, gastrointestinal hemorrhage, and neoplasms; and a lower percentage of deaths with malignancy, pancreatic insufficiency, renal insufficiency, septicemia, or liver disease. Survival has increased in patients with CF, but mortality still is high. This study identified that two patterns of death have emerged in recent years, a death with or a death without CF-related complications. The percentage of
